
English Dialogue

Voice over

Let me tell you this hilarious story about a friend of mine.

Debra

O.K. Now is the time to act. I think we should vote on this. So, all in favour?

Debra (continued)

Everyone raise their hands higher so I can see them properly please.

Voice over

She had this tremendous perspiration problem that was ruling her life.

Debra

Great, thanks a lot Cate. O.K., so I guess we all know that we are united on this issue. We've got to get organized and do something about it though. First we need to brainstorm and determine our strategy, and then we should break down into smaller groups to handle each of the tasks.

Voice over

Her sweating problem was more than just nervousness, it was all the time. Sometimes worse than others. And no matter what she did, sweat literally pored out of her armpits. And she tried everything. She tried not shaving. She tried shaving. (pause) She tried a deodorant crystal. She experimented with charcoal. She made a homemade herbal remedy. And she prayed diligently to the goddess. And when all else failed, she even consulted western medicine. But nothing worked for her.

(pause) Social situations became more and more difficult for her. And it got to the point where even a simple hug stressed her out.

(pause) She came up with these elaborate systems to hide her "problem" from everyone.

(pause) And dancing was especially difficult. I don't know if her sweating problem made her extra sensitive or what, but she said it seemed like everyone was dancing with their arms in the air like fools, just flaunting their dry armpits in her face. She just couldn't handle it.

(pause) She couldn't stop it from coming out, so she just had to keep hiding it.

(pause) She found herself restricting her normal patterns of behavior.

(pause) It was like her body was defying all the rules.

Chandra

Hi.

Voice over

And she couldn't hold it back any longer. her function was not to confine or control water. And that was her moment of clarity. And she wished she could go back and do it all over again.

(pause) So now she's got this really cool girlfriend.

(pause) Well, that's her story.

